A how-to book on using recycled paper to create inexpensive floors, counter tops, walls, tables and decorative art for everyday living.

About the Author Many family outings in Lindas youth were spent visiting construction sites which stemmed from a long family tradition in the building and design industry. Those early experiences instilled in her a great love for home design and led her to study drafting and architecture. A self-taught artist and Southern California native, she has boundless interest in all sustainable building methods. Her dream is for her next home to be built following Gold LEED rating standards (LEED: Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) and will have solar energy, Ecoblocks, a grey-water system, and of course paper pulp floors. Linda and her husband Michael have been married 30 years and together they have raised three beautiful daughters. They live in North San Diego County, CA.
