Petscaping: Training and Landscaping With Your Pet in MindBy HJThis book is very informative to the pets owners (it covers many different types of pets not just cats and dogs). I liked the training advice that was given by the author. Many wonderful photos help one through the decision process of how to do and what not to do in petscaping! I highly recommend this book to others who want to make their own yard a fun place for both them and their pets! Thank you!1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Five StarsBy aschrubsReceived fast, received product exactly as advertised.1 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Good Photos to Share with the Team of Landscape Architects You Have on RetainerBy AgathaThe cover of Petscaping shows a woman with a wheelbarrow and a dog; she is the only do-it-yourselfer or home gardener in this book. The photos are of professionally landscaped grounds surrounding infinity pools and architect-designed gazebos and the suggestions are beyond the budget of most middle class Americans. The focus is on Southern California and doesn't include much about the East or Midwest. I was disappointed; this was not the book for me.

Dogs are human's best friends, and pets have, increasingly, become more like family members. Your castle is their castle and, with that in mind, this book combines tips and expertise for creating the perfect outdoor environment for your pet and gives answers to common behavioral problems such as barking and unwanted excavating of your yard. Through 170 images, you'll be treated to residential landscape designs that feature "pet friendly" zones, including shade and sun areas, pet shelters, edible gardens, and containment. For landscapers, architects, and anyone who owns a pet, this book is a great resource and offers plenty of ideas for co-habitation.

About the Author Scott Cohen is an award-winning garden artisan and landscape, swimming pool, and general contractor behind "The Green Scene." Carolyn Doherty is a professional animal trainer and owner of the Gracious Dog training company.
